Investment strategy allocation

Long equities

Investing in a portfolio of equities based on the expectation that the underlying equities will increase in value within a certain time horizon. Each equity represents an ownership claim in an underlying company which is generally listed on a public stock exchange. The long equities portion of the portfolio includes exposure to large-cap, mid-cap and small-cap stocks.

Absolute bias

An investment strategy that seeks to generate returns, irrespective of the performance of traditional asset classes. These strategies use innovative investment techniques (including but not limited to short selling and leveraging) to profit from rising and falling markets, providing portfolio protection in the event an equity market experiences a significant fall.

About Avenir Capital

Avenir Capital (Avenir) is a global public equity investment firm that follows a high conviction, research-driven investment process underpinned by a background in private equity to deliver strong absolute returns to our clients. Avenir believes that public investment markets can be inefficient and present compelling investment opportunities.

Avenir seeks superior through-cycle risk-adjusted returns by conducting deep fundamental business analysis into investment candidates and seeking to purchase high quality businesses at prices materially below what we estimate to be their intrinsic value. We apply a concentrated, high conviction strategy as we believe that a carefully selected portfolio of high quality, attractively priced businesses reduces risk and maximises potential upside.

Our investment style

Unique to our investment style is a disciplined investment process that applies private equity principles to public equity markets. The fund's investment philosophy is made up of four interrelated components: a high conviction style, value discipline, an owner's mentality and a long-term focus. These components are fundamental to our investment approach and reflect our team members' private equity mindset and background.

High conviction – We run a concentrated portfolio which allows our best ideas to drive performance. Our turnover is relatively low as we exercise discipline and patience in identifying and selecting investments.

Value discipline – We follow a classic value-investing philosophy seeking superior long-term performance through the purchase of a company's securities when they are selling at prices below our estimate of their intrinsic value. An investment becomes more attractive as the difference between price and value, or the margin of safety increases. We will generally commit larger amounts of a client's assets to companies determined to have lower price-to-value ratios and decrease capital committed to companies determined to have higher price-to-value ratios.

Owner's mentality – We approach investing from an owner's perspective as though we are buying a whole business. In doing so, we tune out short-term noise and focus on long-term intrinsic value. Through our rigorous private equity based research process, we identify companies we believe have sustainable competitive advantages allowing them to earn superior cash returns on capital and generate strong free cash flow. We seek to invest in businesses that are run by ethical, capable, shareholder-oriented management teams that have strong operational track records and understand the importance of capital allocation.

Long-term focus – We invest with a three to five-year investment horizon. In doing so, we push against an increasingly short-term focused market. We believe that, given time, the underlying value of a well-chosen business will always prevail over short-term mispricing that may occur in a company's securities. With this mindset we embrace volatility as an opportunity.

We look for companies where the return can be expected to compound through both growth in the intrinsic value of the companies in which we invest, and by purchasing this compounding growth at a substantial discount to our assessed intrinsic value.

Charity in focus: Beyond Blue

About Beyond Blue

Beyond Blue is a national not-for-profit mental health organisation that provides information, support services and innovative tools that help people achieve their best possible mental health.

Beyond Blue and FGG

FGG's latest investment of $313,325 has supported two important projects to improve mental health outcomes for young people in Australia.

FGG funding has ensured the continued provision of the Healthy Families website, an evidence-based resource with plain language information for parents and caregivers to support mental health and wellbeing for their children. Since launching, healthyfamilies.org.au, has helped over one million parents and carers to support the mental health and wellbeing of an estimated 2.1 million children and young people in Australia. More than 100,000 new mums and dads have completed the online checklists, taking proactive steps to better understand and manage their mental health and that of their children.

The support and funding from FGG has also enabled Beyond Blue to improve early intervention pathways for young people accessing the Beyond Blue Support Service, through technical enhancements and provision of Beyond Blue's webchat service. Almost half of all webchat users are aged between 15 and 25.

Rebuilding the current webchat service in January 2019 has improved the quality of the Support Service, by providing an easier and more efficient real-time chat function that is optimised for mobile devices. Since launching the new site, the number of help seekers satisfied with the webchat service has increased significantly and there has been a rise in positive feedback received.

Both of these projects are helping to support the development of healthy, happy and mentally resilient young people, and this would not be possible without the vision and generosity of FGG and its shareholders.

Q&A with Nadine Bartholomeusz-Raymond, General Manager Education and Families at Beyond Blue

What is your driving motivation in your current role?

Half of all lifelong mental health problems begin before the age of 14. I'm responsible for leading work in early intervention and prevention of mental health challenges in families, encompassing life at home, school and in the broader community. An example of this work is the 'Building resilience in children aged 0-12: A practice guide' which was published last year with support from FGG. I want people in Australia to live their most mentally healthy lives from day one.

What is the most challenging aspect of your role?

We are harnessing the power of technology through the Be You online portal in order to overcome geographical barriers to care. Be You (beyou.edu.au) provides educators with knowledge, resources and strategies for helping children and young people achieve their best possible mental health. In my job I'm always looking to do things better and more efficiently to serve our community.

What is the impact of FGG's support?

Beyond Blue's services take time, planning and research before they can be implemented and start making a real difference to people's lives. This difference can only be realised with the backing of our valued partners. In addition to our resilience research and practice guide, this partnership allows Beyond Blue to make vital tools available, such as our resources and mental health checklists for new parents. These tools are there for people to use today, but the benefits will help grow Australia's most mentally healthy generation yet.
